

Daily update 22.1.2010

I know I did not write any daily updates the past couple of days and it's not that I did not have anything to write about, it's just that much to my dismay, I did not have the time to write anything which will respect my readers as opposed to just writing something.

Well, not much has happened this past couple of days, but on the news there have been a lot of updates.

Mr. Abu Mazen said today that the Israeli prime minister Mr. Bibi Netanyahu, and the Israeli's government terms for the peace process are failing the negotiations before they start. Well I have couple of things to say, first and foremost, what peace process? I think the Israeli people have accepted the situation in our region and no one even thinks of a true peace process (no one I know anyway) as a possibility, the Palestinians (and not only them) have done everything they can with the camouflage of terrorist organizations such as the Hamas and Islamic Jihad etc. and they expect to negotiate?

Second of all, the term that Mr. Netanyahu is setting are not so far fetched, Israel is free to built on it's lands, until decided otherwise, the settlements are Israeli land and I don't see any reason to stop building there,

Third, the negotiations of the past did not succeed for a reason, there is no reason for any government to continue a process which failed, in addition, things change in time, and current events raised suspicion and doubt in the Israeli public so I really do think our agenda and term have changed and will not agree to continue the negotiations that took place years ago.

Fourth, Jerusalem is part of the state of Israel, there will be no negotiation about Jerusalem, not now not ever, the sooner the Palestinians (and everyone) understand it the better negotiations outcome will be.

It is quite funny to me how politicians "play" games with each other like little kids, how they say things like "it's not us, it's the big bad terrorists" when it's obvious who's doing what in who's name, but the political game keeps playing and people have to keep playing it, the only ones suffering from this situation are us, the citizens of the world.

If it was up to me, I would simply say, I know what you are doing and I know what are your intentions, I don't have to prove anything to anyone and I care only for my people, either you stop doing it or I will act as I see fit.

A good example is the "second Lebanon war" the Hizbollah was firing rockets at Israel, but the Lebanese government said "it's not us it's those terrorists the Hizbollah..." well I would say something like: Lebanon is a country, what ever happens in your country is your problem, but when something happens in your country such as rockets firing towards my country you got two options:

1. you take control over who ever is firing the rockets and stop them.
2. I will take care of those firing the rockets for you and I will make sure by any means necessary that no more rockets are fired towards my country.

Imagine what would happen if Mexico was to fire rockets the US, what would the Americans do? Would they care that "it's not the Mexican people of the Mexican government it's terrorists"? I think not, I think the US will react with full force and destroy northern Mexico completely to make sure no more rockets are fired.

But that's us, Israel, we care too much about people who don't really care about anyone, not even their own people.
